Benefits of RENC Membership

What is a RENC?

A RENC is an organisation that assists HOs in the production, quality assurance and distribution of ENC. There are currently two RENCs, IC-ENC and PRIMAR. Both deliver ENC services to their members using similar operating models, however, differences do exist. These differences allow ENC Producers intending to join a RENC to choose the operating model and service to best suit their national needs.

What are the benefits of RENC membership?

Data Quality:

IC-ENC and PRIMAR have established and refined quality assurance services in order to ensure ENC quality, consistency and harmonization, benefiting ENC users. Co-ordination and sharing of ENC knowledge and experience among member HOs avoids duplication of work and ensures efficiency.

ENC Distribution:

ENCs distributed through IC-ENC and PRIMAR are available to the end users through a wide range of service providers, under harmonized terms and conditions. This drives high levels of customer service and innovation by the service providers, benefiting ENC users.

Revenue Management:

IC-ENC and PRIMAR provide detailed sales reports for each member, and manage the collection of revenue from Value Added Resellers/Distributors, returning the appropriate amount to the HO.

Other HO services:

IC-ENC and PRIMAR offer other services for HOs, as defined by their operating models, and as set by their members. Such activities include training, workshops, and bespoke technical support. More details are available from their respective websites. Both RENCs also co-operate on aspects of ENC Data Quality and Distribution policies.
